Erin Cosgrove

Erin is this year's Fellowship artist. She uses video, animation, books, painting, scrolls, timelines, installation, and performance to infuse social and political commentary in her creations. Her latest work "What Manner of Person Art Thou?", 2004–2008, a daring, postmodern depiction of quintessential philosophical themes. Over an hour long, the idiosyncratic work is a creation myth, a parable of good and evil, love and learning, faith and ideology, and a tour de force of traditional storytelling with an encyclopedic collage of visual and aural references. Cosgrove references American folk art, Japanese woodblock prints, Indian miniature paintings, medieval engravings, folk, blues, gospel and American spirituals, bluegrass, indigenous African music, and much more.
